

Learning Management Platform

Based on Moodle

Overview

Moodle, an open source learning management platform project was started by Martin Dougiamas and the very first downloadable version of the open source learning platform came in to existence in 2001. The learning platform is first of its kind which was built on the philosophy of social constructionism. Social constructionism believes in constructing something for others to experience. Over the years, the learning platform has grown thick and fast. Today, Moodle has more than 100,000 registered sites and has the maximum of number of users which is roughly over 130 million.
